

Ellen DeGeneres' 'Game of Games' augmented reality play-along challenge merges virtual and real life for increased viewer engagement

HitPoint Studios to present the Wikitude SDK-powered app best practices at Augmented World Expo

SALZBURG, Austria /SANTA CLARA, Calif., May 29, 2019 – HitPoint Studios, a software developer specializing in augmented reality and game development, will discuss the best practices used in developing the Ellen DeGeneres "Game of Games" App on May 30th 11:30 am at Augmented World Expo (AWE), on the Gaming and Entertainment Track (Grand Ball Room G).

"Ellen's Game of Games" is the first talk show to utilize augmented reality for a play-along challenge. The app built using the Wikitude AR SDK, has been live since Jan. 8, and has brought more than 1.1 million television viewers into the virtual world to play trivia games against real players to win prizes instantly from their devices. With the chance to take on the "One-Eyed Monster" or get soaked while finding the umbrella full of cash in "Make It Rain," the more fans play, the more prizes become available, and bigger challenges unlock. More than 22 million matches have been played and $120,000 has been won by app participants in only a few short months.

“We are excited to present our Ellen “Game of Games” App to developers at AWE and illustrate the innovative ways that augmented reality is used to create a more engaging experience that helps build viewer loyalty for the TV show,” says Ariella Lehrer, President at Hit Point Studios.

“We are pleased that the Wikitude SDK is used to develop first-of-its-kind apps that are entertaining, engaging and deliver clear business value”, says Philipp Nagele, Wikitude CTO. “HitPoint is a truly innovative group. We are continually impressed with the ways in which they are incorporating our technology into their solutions.”
